b. 1825, Granville, TN – d. March 1901, Bloomington Springs, Putnam Co., TN, md Overton B. "Dr. B." Mary Frances (McDonald) Anderson, d/o James Porter McDonald & Susan Sophia Edleman.

MARY FRANCES "POP" MCDONALD, daughter of James Porter McDonald and Susan Sophia Edleman, was born about 1825, near Granville, in Jackson County, Tennessee. She was married to Overton B. Anderson on October 15, 1845, in Smith County. She was the mother of eight, possibly nine, children: (1) Infant Anderson, born and died July 1846, (2) Andrew Jackson "Dinks" Anderson, 1849-1895, (3) Eliza Jane "Sis" Anderson Womack, 1852-1940, (4) James Clark Anderson, born 1854, (5) Martha Ann Anderson Wilbanks, born 1856, (6) Susan Anderson Austin, born 1857, (7) Tennessee "Tennie" F. Anderson Massey, born 1861, (8) Possible child was Warren Anderson, born 1862, and (9) Marina "Mary" Frances Anderson King, born 1864.

Pop Anderson's nephew, Haskell McDonald, interviewed by researchers in 1973, remembered her as being "a very good woman, one of the best women I ever seen." He told a story which happened in Smith County, when one of her children was a baby. She had placed the baby in a crib in the yard. The story goes, that Overton B., returned home, riding a horse, and in an inebriated condition. He came running through the yard, mounted on the horse, and jumped over the baby's crib. Apparently, this was not the first time that he had arrived home in an inebriated condition. In retaliation, "Pop" took an ax in hand and chopped the wooden spokes from Overton's new wagon, his "pride and joy." The story did not relate whether or not there was a lesson learned!

According to the pension papers of Overton B. Anderson, Mary "Pop" McDonald Anderson died in March 1901 at Bloomington Springs in Putnam County, Tennessee, where she and O. B. had moved in 1894. (Informant was M. M. Smith, who lived next door to O.B. Anderson in 1900). However, "Dr. B. Anderson" is listed in the 1900 census of Putnam County, Tennessee as widowed; he is living next door to Mac and Carmilla Smith and a boarder "Bethel Gipson," aged 25, is living in the house with O.B. It seems likely from this census information, that M. M. Smith estimated the date of Mary Anderson's death, and March of 1901 is probably incorrect. Mary "Pop" McDonald Anderson's burial place is uncertain. It has been suggested that her grave may have been one of three Anderson family graves on the hill in front of their home in Bloomington Springs. There are no markers. (Source of possible burial location: Walter Hughes Anderson, grandson).

Overton B. "Dr. B." Anderson Obt.

b. 25 January 1825, Jackson Co., TN – d. 28 June 1908, Bloomington Springs, Putnam Co., TN, md Mary Frances (McDonald) Anderson, b. 1825, Granville, TN – d. March 1901, Bloomington Springs, Putnam Co., TN, d/o James Porter McDonald & Susan Sophia Edleman. Overton B. "Dr. B." Anderson, s/o Andrew Anderson & Dorcas Clark.

OVERTON B. "Dr. B" ANDERSON, son of Andrew Anderson and Dorcas Clark, was born January 25, 1825. His pension records gave his exact date of birth and Jackson County, Tennessee, as his birth location, and state that he had lived most of his life "near Maggart." It is believed that this area at that time was part of Jackson County, as the line shifted several times in those days. He was probably born in a little valley, near Maggart, and possibly, in the little cabin pictured in the Carthage Courier in March of 1972.

Overton married Mary "Pop" McDonald on October 15, 1845, in Smith County. They lived in Smith County, most of their married life. O. B. served in the Mexican War, in Company H, First Tennessee Volunteers, for which he was to later receive a pension from the United States Government. He also served in the Confederate Army for about a year during the Civil War--he was a private in B Company, 7th Infantry. Civil War records for him indicate that he was 5 feet, six inches tall; had gray eyes, light hair, and light complexion.

C. Overton B. was involved in various land transactions in Smith County, some of which involved 30 acres left to him and his brother, William P., by their father, Andrew Anderson, in his will. William P., later sold his half of the land to Overton B., February 1, 1848. A picture of the old log cabin on the Anderson homestead appeared in The Carthage Courier, March 1, 1972. It may have been built and settled in by both Andrew Anderson (father of Overton B.) and Andrew Clark (uncle of Overton B.), when they came into the area shortly after the turn of the century. There is an old burying ground, north of the house, referred to as the Anderson Family Cemetery. O. B. and Mary McDonald sold their property in Smith County and bought property in Bloomington Springs, Putnam County, March 31, 1894.

On a trip to Smith and Putnam Counties, Tennessee, in 1973, the creator of this memorial interviewed several people (themselves advanced in age), who remembered Overton B. Anderson. Their remembrances are recounted: (1) O. B. was remembered by a nephew of his wife, Haskell McDonald, as a magician, who did magic tricks and was good with his hands. (2) Fanny Presley, of Baxter, Tennessee, in 1973, remembered that he mixed up a vial of medicine that cured her eyes when she was a small girl. The 1900 Census of Putnam County, Tennessee lists him as "Dr. B. Anderson," and listed his occupation as "Doctor." (3) Lula McBroom remembered that "Aunt Carmilla" and her husband, "Uncle Mac" lived in the house with and cared for "Uncle B," who was a "ball of knots from arthritis and rheumatism." The will of Overton B. Anderson, filed in 1908, left his property in Bloomington Springs to Carmilla Smith in exchange for her "seeing that he was cared for during the remainder of his life."

G. Overton B. Anderson died at home in Bloomington Springs, on June 28, 1908. According to information given by M. M. Smith in the pension papers, O. B. was buried in the "Bloomington Springs Cemetery."

He was a Methodist Minister at the age of 17 and it was through this medium that he became acquainted with the Jernigans in North Carolina. Death entered the home of Denton Presley November 9 and took his wife, Mrs. Genia Gentry Presley who was about 36 years old and had been in bad health for the past year, but only recently had taken to bed. It was hardly realized that her time was so near. It hardly seems right to hear someone speak of Genia was being dead, for she always welcomed you with a smile and such a pleasant disposition and that forgiving spirit.
