MY DAD: The Son's Testimony

Ronald Timothy Denny, born in December of 1950, died in December of 2004. Fifty-four years of enjoyment and living life on the edge. Living life to the fullest is what he did.

I had spent 15 years of my life getting to know my dad a little better every time. With all his outrageous stories of what his life put in front of him, he still had thousands of stories left to tell.

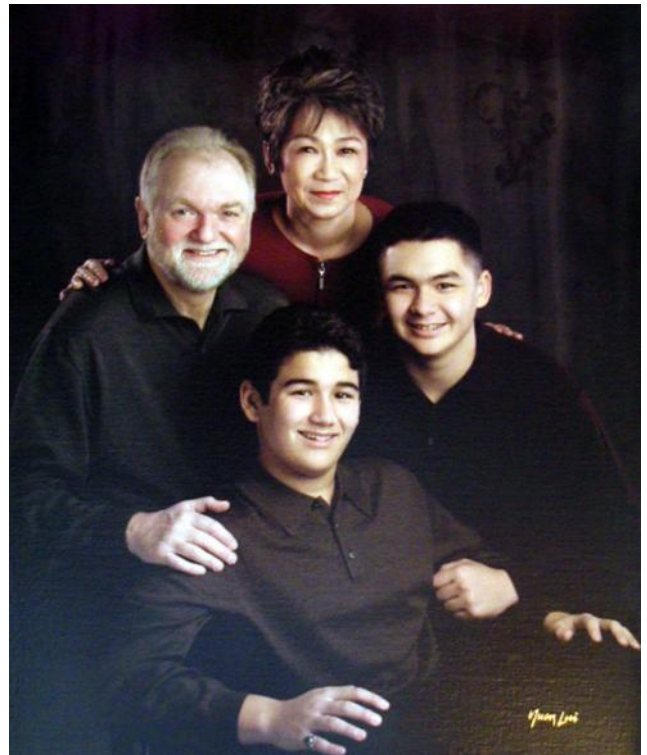

My dad and I were really close when I eventually found out he liked the same music I did. Then we started golfing together which was hilarious when your with my dad. I remember this one time when I sprayed like 20 five dollar each golf balls in all directions. My dad just told me that he was going to buy me 20 cent range balls instead to practice with. We never got around to getting those range balls. But I am glad that in my dad's last years I finally got to learn about who my dad was and how he impacted my life as well as how I impacted his. It's just like a golf swing, how well you impact the ball is how far it will go. How well my dad impacted my life putting into golf ball terms could hit me all the way to the moon and back again.

My dad, my free taxi cab driver, my money source, but above all else, my dad, who puts other people's welfare before his.
