COOKEVILLE -- Eleanor Drake Mitchell, one of the Upper Cumberland's most accomplished and distinguished citizens, died at her home this morning. She was 81.

Dr. Mitchell, a retired college professor, fell ill from kidney disease only recently and, after undergoing some treatment, insisted on returning to her home to spend her last days.

She was known for her accomplishments and contributions in many fields, including scholarship in literature, public service in schools, civic efforts and her church and hobbies which ranged from aviation to genealogy.

She served on the Putnam School Board from 1980 until 1995, holding the chairmanship for one year.

Her distinguished academic career began back at Cookeville Central High School, where she graduated as valedictorian. She attended David Lipscomb College and later graduated from Tennessee Polytechnic Institute. She earned a Masters degree at the University of Tennessee, a PhD from the University of Maryland, and did post graduate work in Mexico and at Oxford University in England.

While still an undergraduate at TPI, she attended a 12-week civil aviation course at Austin Peay Normal School in conjunction with the war effort and after returning to Tennessee Tech, became the first woman to fly solo out of the Cookeville Airport. She later taught aviation courses at TPI.

She taught high school classes in West Tennessee and in Texas and later returned here to teach English at Tennessee Tech for more than 40 years.

She was nominated many times for the TTU Faculty of the Year award, and received that honor in 1988. She was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Delta Kappa Gamma and Phi Delta Kappa honorary societies.

In addition to work in numerous other societies, she was a member of an international zoological expedition to Belize, Central America, in 1981. She belonged to the South Atlantic Modern Language Association, the Tennessee Philological Association in which she held various offices, and was a surveyor and member of the Reaffirmation Committee for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

In 1987, she was named the first Putnam County Business Woman of the Year. She taught the Ladies Sunday School class at Jefferson Avenue Church of Christ for many years and was past president and treasurer for the Book Lovers Club.

She had been an active member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and was active in the Upper Cumberland Genealogical Association, holding several offices.

She published numerous articles, essays and papers throughout her career. In 1987, she presented a paper taken from her book, "Tete a Tetes and other Biography in the Town and Country Magazine 1769-1796," at the Seventh International Congress in the Enlightenment in Budapest, Hungary.

One of her proudest accomplishments was co-authorship of "The Draper Families in America."

She is listed in "Personalities of the South," "Outstanding Educators of America," "Directory of American Scholars," "Who's Who of American Women," and "International Who's Who."

We, the family of Eleanor Jane Drake Mitchell, extend our love and gratitude to so many who provided love and support during this difficult time. We thank all who called, sent food, memorials, cards and visited. A special thanks goes to the singers at her celebration of life service, the Johnny Fox family, Morris Irby, and Jann Cupp, to Brother Gary Hampton and Glen McDoniel for their uplifting words of joy and comfort; to the Christians at Jefferson Avenue who provided the lovely meal; to the doctors, especially Dr. Kenny Lynn, Dr. Lee Crowe, and Dr. Scott Copeland, for their compassionate care; to the nurses and staff on 5 East at the Cookeville Regional Medical Center and at the Gambro dialysis center, to the care givers at Caris Hospice, especially Tina Johns and Eva Covington; to David Horner and his staff; to the Ladies Sunday School class at Jefferson Ave., to mother's fellow DAR members and fellow members of the UCGA, to that special class of 1942, and a special thanks to Larry Mabry for the loving care he showed which allowed our mother to spend her last two weeks at home.

The family of Eleanor Jane Drake Mitchell.

Dick Mitchell remembered as man of many talents

One of Cookeville's most prominent citizens, Richard L. (Dick) Mitchell, has died at the age of 85.

A retired attorney with a distinguished career which included public service here and in Washington, D.C., Mr. Mitchell was a man of many accomplishments and many friends.

He died at his home on December 24, 2004. Funeral services were held Monday, Dec. 27 at Jefferson Avenue Church of Christ. Burial, with military honors, was in Cookeville City Cemetery.

Mr. Mitchell, the husband of Dr. Eleanor Drake Mitchell, had served for many years as field representative for Congressman Joe L. Evins and worked in Washington, D.C., for nearly 10 years as chief counsel for the House of Representatives Small Business subcommittee, where he held investigative hearings on anti-trust issues.

He had also served as a professor of law at Pepperdine University for a number of years, had held many offices in various civic organizations, including the presidency of the Tennessee Young Democrats and the Tennessee Society in Washington. He was a member of the VFW, the American Legion, the Jaycees, and the Lions Club. He served on the first board of Cookeville Regional Hospital, which received its first accreditation during his tenure.

But of all his achievements, one which benefited children brought him the most pride, friends said. He helped to organize and then served as president of the first Little League in this area.

He was a member and former elder of the Jefferson Avenue Church of Christ. He also worked with youth groups and was known for his vivid storytelling skills.

Born Oct. 28, 1919, in Livingston, Tenn., he was the son of Charles Denton and Grace Howard Mitchell. His ancestors, including the Mitchells, Carlocks, Bates, and Terrys, were among the earliest settlers in the Upper Cumberland region.

He graduated as salutatorian at Livingston Academy and attended Cumberland University and Milligan College and later earned his law degree from the University of Tennessee.

Before World War II, he traveled about the country and worked in a shipyard and worked as a tire builder and as a merchant marine. During the war, he served in the South Pacific and in the Army of Occupation.

After the war, he moved to Brownsville, Texas, and began practicing law, later returning to Cookeville where he practiced law for nearly 50 years, most of those years with the Langford and Langford firm.

In addition to his wife of 55 years, his family includes his son and daughter-in-law, R. Laken Mitchell III and Glenda; his daughter and son-in-law, Suzanna Jane Mitchell and Robert Mann of Rhode Island and Hilham, Tenn.; four granddaughters, Mary Jane Baker of Canton, Georgia; Patricia Ann Freeman of Morristown, Tenn.; Susannah Cotter of Rhode Island; and Samantha Cotter of New York; a brother, John Howard Mitchell of Oak Ridge.

He was preceded in death by his parents and two brothers, Charles Denton (Dense) Mitchell and William G. Mitchell.

Mike Birdwell speaks at DAR meeting Club News

The Old Walton Road Chapter of the DAR met on Tuesday October 26 at the home of Jan MacKenzie. Refreshments were served by Frances Benedict and Edith Toline.

Regent Claude Ann Burton called the meeting to order and led the members in the ritual. Chaplain Kaye Craig gave the devotional, Kate Harwood gave the National Defense Message, and Jessie Watts gave a Constitutional Side Light reporting that grades 5-8 have been given two options for the essay contest. The students can write an obituary for George Washington or interview a Senior Citizen.

Frances Benedict announced three new members: Eunetta Jenkins, Paula Anderson and Kendra Walker Huseman. A new recording secretary was elected, Ronda Brewster Walker, who read the minutes from the September meeting and after a couple of additions were approved as read.

Vice Regent Dr. Eleanor Mitchell introduced program speaker Dr. Mike Birdwell, history professor at Tennessee Tech University. Dr. Birdwell gave an in-depth profile of a World War I soldier from Monterey, Albert Perrin Smith. Birdwell gained insight into Smith's life through letters Smith wrote to his family during the war.

Other members in attendance included Catherine Compton, Hannah Hall, Aurelia Hannon, Jimmie Jaquess, Margaret Markum and Martha Willis.

Jesse A. Drake, 64, well known lawyer of the Cookeville bar, died Friday in a Nashville hospital, after a lingering illness of several months.

Funeral services were conducted last Sunday afternoon, at the Smithville Cemetery, by Dr. R. L. Mason, and the Rev. Hugh L. Goodpasture.

Mr. Drake was born and reared in DeKalb County and belonged to a prominent pioneer family of that County. As a young man he began the practice of law in Smithville. He later located in Atlanta, GA, and while a resident of Atlanta, he served as Assistant U. S. District Attorney.

About 12 years ago, he located in Cookeville, and enjoyed the practice of his profession here, until forced to retire several months ago, on account of ill health.

He was twice married; his first wife died many years ago. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. May Anderson Drake, and by four grandchildren.

He was a brother of the late Judge James E. Drake, of Smithville. He was a member of the Church of Christ, an able lawyer, and a gentleman of the kindest and most generous impulses.

The funeral services at Smithville on last Sunday afternoon was largely attended.

Active pall bearers were Judge O. K. Holladay, Judge E. H. Boyd, and L. M. Bullington, of the Cookeville bar, and Jack Allen, G. S. Buckner, and R. L. Turner, of the Smithville bar. Honorary pallbearers were the other members of the Cookeville and Smithville bars.
