

BROWN HOUSE
By Ina Clayton Askew

On winter nights as could wind blew,
Around the fire, when chores were through;
We'd sing those songs I still can hum-
"When the Glory Morning Comes"

Many days have come and gone,
Since we sang those good old songs;
And this one tune we sang of old,
"ME-RE-D-ME-RE-DO-LA-SOL"

When Sunday came we "oft did meet,
At old Brown House, on Indian Creek;
And there we'd sing from books of Vaughn,
About the day when Glory Dawned.

No nursery room, nor books galore,
But children stretched out on the floor;
Upon perhaps a ragged quilt-
Which served the purpose as good as silk.

'Twas here I remember Brother Myers,
With his hands flung upward to the stars;
He knocked the lamp from off the wall,
And caught it fast before its fall.

There were Leftwiches, Suttons, Pritchards and Shanks,
Robinson and Browns-one was named Frank;
Maddux and Bryants and Whiteheads, too,
I'll name a few others and then I'm through.

There were Chambers and Adams and those named Keith,
The Goolsbys and Bushes, and more beside these;
I remember there were some Maynards, too,
And the Helms and Boyds before I'm through.

There was Elizabeth's gang- The Anderson boys,
The Elrod family, along with the Carrs;
Then counting our gang, you verily could see,
you verily could see,
That OLD BROWN HOUSE was as full as could be.

Sometimes we had "Dinner on the Ground"
And all of us there gathered round;

Better food could not be found,
By those who lived in bigger towns.

‘Uncle’ Whit Wallace was often there,
Drying his eyes after saying his prayer;
I wouldn’t take a fortune in shining gold,
As exchange for those memories of “Dear Ones” of old.

There is much that is lost in today’s chic and style,
Things of great value that are still worth our while;
So it’s a joy to remember when our loved ones did meet,
Down at OLD BROWN HOUSE on Big Indian Creek.
