Sadler, Joseph Roberts VanRip, Herman C. Vison, Jesse Harold Vinson, Paul George Whitworth, Richard Hargis Winningham and W. P. Woodall.

If a name has been left off, call (931) 653-4511 so they can be added.

At 10 a.m., as part of the opening ceremony, the Granville Museum will honor someone who has been a special supporter of the Granville community and Museum.

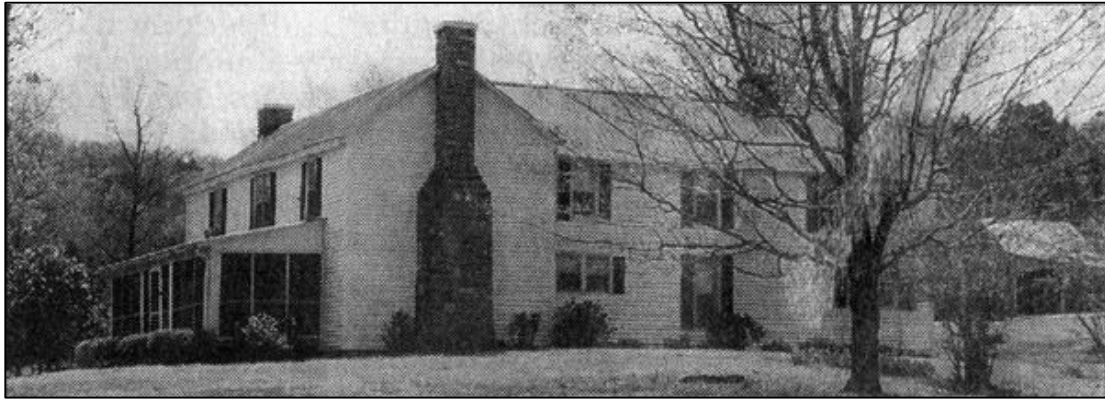

The first award will go to Gene Duke, and the award will be named for him in the future. Gene was one of the founders of the Granville Museum in 1999, and he passed away in 2004. He is remembered as a tremendous supporter and worker in the museum, and also as someone who loved Granville.

At 10 a.m., the museum will also begin the Granville century home and farm recognition. Each year at Heritage Day, a Granville home or farm will be honored that has been in the same family for more than 100 years.

The 2005 award will go to the Thomas Jefferson and Maggie Burton Maddux home and farm on Martin's Creek. The farm has been in the family since the early 1800's

The museum will also begin the Granville Walking Tour, which is a self-guided tour of 20 historic spots in the town of Granville. You may pick up a brochure at the Granville Museum which will guide you to each place with a historical description of each. A map is include to guide you as one walks the historical streets of Granville.

A special invitation is extended to everyone to come be a part of this day.

The home of Thomas Jefferson and Maggie Burton Maddux on Martins Creek in the west end of Putnam County built prior to 1796 will receive Granville's first Century Home and Farm Award at Heritage Day. When this house was built Tennessee was still part of North Carolina.

QUILT FESTIVAL KICKS OFF GRANVILLE FALL CELEBRATION

Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN

8 September 2006

GRANVILLE -- The Granville Museum will celebrate their fall event Oct. 7 consisting of the 7th annual Granville Quilt Festival, the 3rd annual Jazz of the Cumberland, and the Granville Storytelling Festival, a new level with storytelling and the dedication of a new "Steamboat on the Cumberland" exhibit and a new "Doctors of Granville exhibit."

This year's quilt festival will have several new features consisting of a new competitive category for machine quilted quilts, "Old Fashion Quilt Turning," and quilt classes on "Create Quilting Designs" and "Machine Quilting."

This event annually has more than 100 quilts entered and the 2006 show will honor lifetime quilter Hazel Clemons for her personal homemade collection of exhibit. This event will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Granville United Methodist Church.

"Jazz on the Cumberland" will be at Granville Veteran's Park, beginning with music workshops at 11 a.m. and jazz bands performing from noon to 6 p.m. on a stage on the banks of the Cumberland River. At 3 p.m. a special Veteran's Appreciation Service will be conducted at the park honoring all veterans with a special memorial of Granville natives Maj. Willis Carter and Maj. Col. Blair Davis Burgess, Sr.

The first Granville Storytelling Festival will be at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., beginning at the old Granville Bank with five stops in a city block with a different storyteller at each. This event will bring history alive and will entertain all ages.

The Granville Museum will dedicate the new "Doctors of Granville" display at 10 a.m. and will be followed by a program entitled, "Doctors of Jackson County" by Dr. E.M. Dudley.

At 2 p.m. the museum will dedicate a new exhibit entitled "Steamboat on the Cumberland," telling the story of historic Granville as it relates to being a riverboat town. A great amount of lost history has been discovered to make this exhibit possible. At 2:15 Michael Birdwell will present a program on "History of Steamboat on the Cumberland" and at 2:45 Jerry McFarland will present a program on "Sinking of Steamboats in Jackson County."

The museum is currently booking craft booths. For more information, call (931) 653-4511 or visit www.granvillemuseum.com.

MEMORIAL SERVICE PLANNED AT GRANVILLE MUSEUM ON SATURDAY

Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN
28 May 28, 2004

The Granville Museum will conduct its annual Memorial service on May 29 as part of the Sixth Heritage Day.

The service will be at 11 a.m. at the Granville United Methodist church and will be conducted by Bro. Steve Deavers. There will be special music.

The service will recognize ones who have passed away from Granville since the 2003 Heritage Day.

Anyone who was born in Granville or who has lived in Granville sometime during their life will be recognized.

The families of these loved ones are asked to be a part of this memorial service. A candle will be lit in memory of each person.

The following will be remembered: Gartha Agee, Melvin W. Alcorn, Royal Booker, Ethel Brown, Wilma Burgess, Ruby Vantrease Byrne, Alsie Lee Carter, Ernest Dow Carter, Jesse Lon Clemons, Joe Fennell, Mary Elizabeth Cowan, Dr. Dowell Edward Flatt, Tommy Frey, Floyd B. Harris, Jr., Samantha Jade Lambert, Ina Frances Wade Mathis, Willie Freeman Neal, Hugh Lee Quarles, Rob Robinson, Fred Smith, Larry M. Smith, Beatrice Stout, Ola Mai Thomas, Verble Wade, Dr. Glenn Ferrell Watts, Sr., Gordon Willoughby, Hubert Woodard.

At the conclusion of the service, Larry Clinkenbeard, owner of Anderson Funeral Home, Gainesboro, will minister to the families and release a dove.

Outside the church following the service, three birds will be placed in a miniature chapel while a lovebird placed in a beautiful heart shaped basket. The three birds in the chapel represent the Trinity or angels while the one bird represents the deceased.

The three birds are released from the chapel first and then the lovebird is released and joins them. The birds usually circle two or three times, as if to say goodbye, before flying off together. The birds will then return to their loft in Gainesboro.

This meaningful service will conclude with the song "I'll Fly Away."

GRANVILLE TO HOST VETERANS APPRECIATION DAY THIS SATURDAY

Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN
4 November 2000

The town of Granville will host a Veterans Appreciation Day on Nov. 4 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. at the Granville Museum. This year's focus will be on World War II maneuvers.

Granville was one of the communities which was in the heart of the maneuvers.

The maneuvers, which first began in 1941 and did not end until 1944, ultimately involved over 850,000 troops.

Every county in Tennessee, as well as portions of adjoining states, were either the sites of numerous exercises or served in support roles.

The maneuvers were a dress rehearsal for the invasion by the Allies of Axis Powers controlled Europe, specifically operation "Overlord," also known as D-Day and the ultimate victory over tyranny in WWII.

The terrain of Smith County and all of Tennessee is very similar to western Europe, which is why Tennessee was chosen as the focal point of the maneuvers.

At 2:15 p.m. on Saturday, veteran Vincent B. DeNardo will be honored during a special ceremony making him an honorary citizen of Granville. Also during the ceremony, all veterans of the Granville community will be honored.

DeNardo came to Granville on July 4, 1943, with the 551st Engineers Battalion from Camp Gordon, Ga., to take part in the maneuvers there.

After the war, he returned to Granville for his vacation each year from 1949 until some time in the late 70s. Each year, he took pictures of the Granville community which now help show the history of the town. They are on display in the Granville Museum.

The day's events will also include a World War II maneuvers exhibit, which will be set up by Col. Jim D. Anderson, executive director of the WWII Tennessee Maneuvers Commission. He will speak at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Army National Guard of Tennessee will have a special display including a M1A3 Bradley fighting vehicle, a military hummer, a Humvee and other military vehicles.

The public is welcome, and there is no admission charge.

HALLIE CLEMONS TURNS 100
Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN
30 August 1999

Hallie Mai Clemons, who turned 100 on August 5, celebrated on August 8 at the home of her grandson and granddaughter-in-law, Randall and Peggy Clemons at Granville.

She was born at Granville to Alonzo and Minnie Huff.

She is one of three children; her sister, Sallie Bee Stout of Baxter, is 95.

Mrs. Clemons and her husband Jimmy were married on December 25, 1914. They had been married 64 years at the time of his death in 1978.

The couple had three children, Jesse Lon and James Edward of Carthage and Minnie Lena Mullinax of Cookeville. Mrs. Clemons has five grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Today, Mrs. Clemons remains active, taking care of her home, cooking, sewing, and attending to her flowers.

She enjoys crocheting and has made items for all her family and friends.

Mrs. Clemons attended the Granville United Methodist Church for 69 years and has attended the Carthage United Methodist Church for the past 31 years.

She was honored by the State Senate with a proclamation of recognition of her 100th birthday. She also received a card from President Clinton and was congratulated on NBC's Today Show.

Mrs. Clemons presented her family with a book about her life on her 100th birthday.

This book contains her memories of her life as a recognition from her children, which notes she has devoted her life to her family. It says she credits God for her excellent health and that "She is looking forward to the New Millennium, when she can proudly say she has lived during all three centuries."

GRANVILLE CELEBRATING ITS 200 YEARS WITH TOURS, REENACTMENT

Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN

8 May 1999

Tracey LeFevre

Herald-Citizen Staff

The Granville community of Jackson County celebrates its 200th year of settlement this year.

And in recognition of that achievement, members of the Granville Community Club have organized a Homecoming celebration, to begin at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

Performing in the event's opening ceremony at that time will be the Jackson County High School Band.

And at noon, members of the Jackson County chapter of Sons of Confederate Veterans will present a living history enactment, offering visitors a glimpse back in time to see what a typical Confederate camp looked like during the Civil War.

"We'll be dressed in period uniforms and can give firing demonstrations and answer questions that anyone might have about the Civil War," SCV member Henry Ford said. "There's usually some role playing involved in anything we do like this, and we'll be portraying the camp just as it would have been back in the period from 1861 to 1865."

At 2 p.m., following the living history presentation, a memorial service will be held at the Granville Cemetery.

And a walking tour of some historical sites in the town will wrap up the event.

Included in the walking tour will be the office of the late Dr. Freeman, the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches and the still-active Granville Church of Christ building.

"Dr. Freeman, I think, delivered most of the babies around here for a long time, and from the stories I've hear about him, he was quite a character," Granville resident Leo Yates said.

Granville Community Club member Ann Turner agreed.

"It was pretty common for doctors to make house calls when he first began practicing medicine in 1906," she said. "But I can remember Dr. Freeman making house calls clear on up to the 1960s, so his practice was unique for that reason."

Although a Confederate veteran who served as a chaplain during the Civil War is buried at Granville's Cooper Cemetery, Ford said, no actual battle was ever fought in any part of Jackson County.

"Any struggle that killed fewer than 1,000 men, however, was classified as a skirmish rather than a battle," he said. "There was a skirmish fought on Jackson County soil."

But Jackson County and Granville history is also rich for other reasons, resident James Turner said.

One reason, for example is the Fort Blount ferry, which for almost 200 years assisted travelers crossing the Cumberland River at Holleman's Bend, near Granville.

"The Holleman's, some of the earliest settlers to the area, put in place a ferry that was equipped to bring passengers and supplies across the river at this point," Turner said.

In 1799, he continued, a traveler and his horse could use the ferry to cross the river for less than 25 cents, but the cost for a wagon and team to cross was an expensive $1.25.

An early post office was erected in an area known as Beech Hill, and it appears to have been a popular gathering place for early settlers in the 1790s, Turner said.

But the name of that post office was officially changed from Beech Hill to Granville probably in or around 1830.

Because the settlement was located along the Cumberland River, steamboat transportation was important to its vitality.

The river was used to import items such as whiskey and salt into the community.

"Whiskey could be purchased for 60 cents a barrel, and salt could be bought for 90 cents a barrel," Turner said.

Salt was especially important to people of the Granville community, he said, because of the amount of pork that was exported from the site.

In addition, much tobacco and flour was also exported.

"The steamboats continued to sail up the river toward Burnside, Ky., well into the 20th century," Turner said. "There are folks here today who certainly do remember the whistles of the boats as they docked here."

In addition to the events, visitors will also be able to purchase such items as commemorative t-shirts, cookbooks and Granville history books.

Any information about Granville history for the town museum and archive can be brought to the Community Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. every day except for Wednesday and Sunday.

* For more information about the Homecoming celebration, call Ann Turner at 931-653-4479.

* For more information about the museum and archive, call Arnold or Helen Reynolds at 931-653-4433 or write to P.O. Box 29, Granville, TN 38564.

* For more information about the Jackson County chapter of Sons of Confederate Veterans, call Henry Ford at 931-268-3442, write to him at 228 Allentown Road, Gainesboro, TN 38562 or e-mail him at <hford@infoave.net>.

To get to the Granville community from Cookeville, take Highway 70 west through Baxter and at Cole's Store turn north on State Highway 96 into Granville.

SATURDAY A DAY OF DEDICATIONS, FESTIVITY AT GRANVILLE

Herald Citizen Newspaper, Cookeville, TN

16 May 1998

By TRACEY LeFEVRE HERALD-CITIZEN Staff

The dedication of a new bridge and adjacent park in Jackson County's Granville community on Saturday will honor an old way of life.

The Dr. Luther M. Freeman Bridge, for example, is named for a local physician who practiced in Granville from 1906 to 1973, more than 65 years.

It replaces an old bridge of the same name which crossed Martin's Creek near the point where the creek empties into Cordell Hull Lake.

And the Veterans' Memorial Park will honor all of the historic community's men and women who served in the military during wartime.

"The community has really been involved in helping to plan this event," said Ann Turner, a member of the event's planning committee. "We hope to see all of Granville's veterans out at the dedication that day. It will be an enjoyable, leisurely day for everyone."

Saturday's schedule of events begins with an antique car show from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Vehicles featured in the show will be a Model A, a Model T, a 1955 Chevy and a 1957 Ford convertible.

The dedication of both the bridge and park, which are located side-by-side, will be at 2 p.m.

Opening statements will be made by Wilson Bank and Trust President Randall Clemons, who is also a member of the event's planning committee; and James Turner will outline some of the historical events that have taken place in Granville since it was settled in 1799.

"Jackson County Executive Frank Williams will give the dedication of the park's veterans' memorial stone, and members of the National Guard will raise the flag in the park," Turner said.

US Congressman Bart Gordon, State Sen. Tommy Burks and State Rep. Les Winningham are also expected at the dedication, Turner said.

At 2:30, the community's veterans will be honored by being able to participate in the "Parade of Time" across the new bridge. Antique cars and tractors and an old US Army Jeep will be featured in the parade.

Several of Granville's historic buildings will be open for a walking tour of the community that begins at 3 p.m. Buildings that people will be able to visit include the office of the late Dr. Freeman, the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches and the still-active Granville Church of Christ building.

"Dr. Freeman, I think, delivered most of the babies around here for a long time, and from the stories I've heard about him, he was quite a character," said Granville resident Leo Yates.

Much of the medical equipment he used throughout the 67 years he practiced in Granville will be displayed in his office so people taking the walking tour can see them, Turner said.

"It was pretty common for doctors to make house calls when he first began practicing medicine in 1906," Turner said. "But I can remember Dr. Freeman making house calls clear on up to the 1960s, so his practice was quite unique at that time."

A Confederate memorial service will be held at 3:30 p.m. in Granville's Cooper Cemetery.

"Cooper Cemetery has many old graves, one of which belongs to a Confederate soldier who served as a chaplain in the War Between the States," Turner said.

A memorial service at Granville Cemetery will be held at 4 p.m., directly after the service at Cooper Cemetery.

The dedication day will conclude with a community picnic at the new park.

"Bring a covered dish and join us for dinner," Turner said. "About 200 hamburgers have been donated to the Granville Community Club to serve at the picnic."

To get to the Granville community from Cookeville, take Highway 70 west through Baxter and at Cole's Store turn north on State Highway 96 into Granville.

For more information about the dedication, call Ann Turner at (931) 653-4479.

Martha (Stanton) Maddux Obt. #1

Mrs. Martha Stanton Maddux died at her home near Granville last Saturday. She was the widow of the late Robert Maddux who died many years ago. Since childhood Mrs. Maddux has been a consecrated Christian being a member of the Methodist Church. She always went about doing good. Kindness to the needy and sick seemed to give her pleasure. Surviving are her 2 daughters, Mesdames Charles McClarin of Carthage, and Mrs. Luther M. Freeman of Granville, and 1 son, Thomas J. Maddux of Granville, Mrs. John Oliver, Mrs. Charles Reagan, and Mrs. Oakley Massa of this city are her nieces.

Herald newspaper, Cookeville, TN: 28 February 1924, front page.

Martha (Stanton) Maddux Obt. #2

MOTHER OF MRS. CHAS. MCCLAIN PASSES AWAY:

Mrs. Robert Maddux: After a brief illness of a week's duration, Mrs. Robert Maddux formally of Putnam and Jackson Counties most esteemed and beloved women, passed away at her home near Granville on Saturday night at ten o'clock, February 23rd 1924.

Martha Stanton was born March 28, 1852 in Putnam County at Stanton Branch. In early childhood she united with the Union Hill Methodist Church existing at that time near her home. On December 25th 1872 she was married to Robert Maddux. To them were born three children.

Her surviving relatives are her three children: Mrs. Chas. McClarin, Carthage, TN; Mrs. L. M. Freeman and Thomas J. Maddux of Putnam County, near Granville; one brother, Garland Stanton of Nashville and her ten grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the home conducted by Rev. J. D. Judkin, pastor of the Methodist Church of Granville. Mrs. Maddux was laid to rest in the family burial ground, situated on the brow of the hill on the home place.

Mrs. Maddux or Miss Martha as she was affectionately called by many, was a woman of noble characteristics and of a most lovable and charming personality and attractive appearance. A woman whose Christianity was no cold superficial varnish of mere creeds and doctrines to be displayed only while within the portals of church buildings, or on Sundays alone; but a vital, breathing principle – following day by day and hour by hour in the daily grind of life, that rule of all rules, the Golden rule. It flourished and flowered and shone on those about her because it was the very warp and woof of her being, her religion and ideals manifested themselves not in chill austerity and fault-finding of others chosen conduct but in cheeriness, kindness and justice; nor did it rob her of her gentile sense of humor.

Though an interesting and most intelligent conversationalist with a rich sparkle of humor, yet her converse was never smirched by unkind or critical comments on others. Nor was friend, conscience nor justice ever sacrificed on the altar of unfair and unjust material gain.

And such attributes and characteristics are the very essence of spiritual food. Such characters and such lives are the threads from which have been woven the stability and purity of our America. Were the whole world made up of such as she there would be little need for endless peace plan discussions.

What greater tribute could be extended to one who while leaving behind her in her community, the richness of her influence to live forever, has passed on to the Great Beyond, bearing her golden sheaves of righteousness and useful living to lay at the feet of the Creator of all things.

The shrines of such women are their homes. And her's was no exception to this rule. Her fidelity to home and family was awarded by love and courtesy from her children and her children's children. In that home of all those years of her married life, gracious hospitality has for all those years, warmed the hearts of the many guests in the traditional southern style, assembled around its ample fireside in winter, and in summer in the shadow of its long porch which looks out across road, fields and fringed stream to the hills beyond.

As thus we know her – we, who are not even of blood ties. And thus also, her children and grandchildren her sisters and brother have known her. The world needs more of such as she.

GRANVILLE MUSEUM WINS VOLUNTEERISM AWARD OF SMALL MUSEUMS

GRANVILLE - The Tennessee Association of Museums awarded the Granville Museum the 2006 Volunteerism Award of Small Museums in Tennessee at their annual convention. The museum had submitted their 2006 program of work which consisted of the “Steamboats of the Cumberland” exhibit, Granville Historical Cookbook, Storytelling Festival and three museum newsletters which had been sent to 1,200 former residents as well as all local mailboxes.

“The awards committee received nominations from an all-volunteer museum that preserves the history of a small town on the Cumberland River,” said John Holtzapple, 2006 TAM Awards Chairman.

“What stood out on each of these nominations was the amount of work...the level of commitment...of the museum’s 37 volunteers. Each of their nominations contained extensive research on the town’s history with a great deal of organization and commitment.”

Receiving the award on behalf of the museum volunteers was Granville Museum President Randall Clemons. Clemons expressed the honor the museum volunteers felt to receive the award and the progress that had been made since the museum’s inception in 1999 and attributed the success to the strength and commitment of the volunteers. He stated.

“We are continually amazed at the level of commitment of our volunteers and the strong support we received from people who have Granville roots,” Clemons said.

The 2007 program of work to be completed by Heritage Day on May 26 includes a “Wall of Heroes” which will contain 5x7 pictures of all individuals who have served in the military from Granville, a new Granville General Stores exhibit focusing on all the past general stores of Granville, a new exhibit on Dowell Funeral Home, a new exhibit on the black history of Granville and a history of Granville Church of Christ.

Those with pictures, memorabilia, etc., pertaining to these new exhibits is encourage to mail them as soon as possible to Granville Museum, P. O. Box 26, Granville, TN 38564.
