Louise Medley Answers 'WHUB'

Louise Medley surely would have made a good telephone operator. She's had enough practice over the past 30 years and more.

As the only person to answer the telephone and keep the books for many years at WHUB, she may have the best-known telephone voice and one of the more familiar faces in Cookeville.

She came to WHUB in 1956, and things in the office were quite a bit different then.

"There are several old-timers I call them still here, and I was the only person then to do the bookkeeping and act as the receptionist," she said.

Since 1956, she has missed just one day of work.

A stickler for accuracy - - a fact she's quite proud of - - Miss Medley still checks all receipts for correctness.

"We have computers now, but I still check them all by hand. I don't really want to get into computers, although we have had several here, and some of our staff members enjoy using them, and they use them well," she added.

It has been a joy for Miss Medley
