

COOKEVILLE CITY SCHOOL
Putnam County Herald, Cookeville, TN
28 November 1935
<http://www.ajlambert.com>

The present building occupied by the Cookeville Elementary School was erected in 1922. An Elementary school was taught from 1922 until 1924. At that time the High School was removed from Tennessee Polytechnic to this building, where it remained until 1932. It then became necessary to separate the High School Department from the Elementary due to the large enrollment. Since that time only the eight grades have been taught here.

The building contains, in addition to its twenty-five classrooms, an auditorium with a seating capacity of twelve hundred and fifty. In order to relieve the crowded condition of the building made by an enrollment of eight hundred and fifty children, a project is being considered to build three or four ward schools in different parts of the city.

The school ground is being improved greatly, not only from a standpoint of beauty, but because of its being made a better and safer place for the children to play. This is made possible by leveling the ground, removing dead trees, sodding, and planting shrubbery on various parts of the campus.

At present the faculty consists of twenty-one regular teachers and two nursery teachers. In addition to this regular teaching staff the various departments of music, dancing, art, and expression are conducted by well trained teachers.

Death of Miss Mary Jenkins:

Putnam County Herald, Cookeville, TN: 30 January 1936.

Funeral services will be held today, in Lebanon, for Miss Mary Jenkins, aged 61, a widely known and greatly loved teacher, who has been teaching in the public schools of Lebanon for the past twenty-eight years, prior to which time she was a teacher in the Cookeville City school for several years.

She was held in the most affectionate esteem by many people of Cookeville who are her former pupils.

Her death occurred Tuesday night, in a Lebanon hospital, following a few days' illness of pneumonia.

Miss Jenkins was born and reared in Lebanon and was a graduate of Cumberland University.

She is survived by one brother, Geo. Jenkins, of Lebanon.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT CITY SCHOOL
END ALMOST A CENTURY OF HISTORY
Putnam County Herald, Cookeville, TN
5 June 1952

The doors of Cookeville City School were closed for the last time last Friday ending a period of almost a century that a school has been operated on the site. Next fall will mark the first time since the Civil War days the absence of the sound of school bells and the sound of children playing on the grounds.

Three modern buildings replace the school where four generations of Cookevillians have learned the three R's, all which have been built or enlarged in the past year.

Many changes have taken place since the four acre site was sold to the trustees of Washington Academy on a hot July day 92 years ago for the sum of $200. The two story brick building was started in the late 1850's but was not completed until after the Civil War. Walter S. McClain says in his history of Putnam County the building was located in a wilderness of scrubby oaks and chinquapin bushes and was the only house west of the branch except two or three widely scattered residences.

The old landmark was torn down in 1898 to make room for a much larger and more modern building which was opened as the Cookeville High School in 1901. This building in turn was removed to make way for the present building which cost $100,000 to construct in 1921.

A short program in the auditorium featured the closing program by the pupils of the seventh and eighth grade. The devotional was conducted by Carol Hudson and Roenelia Goolsby. A duet "The Lord is My Shepherd" was sung by Kay and Shirley Johnson. Hubert Bennett, Jr. led the group in the pledge to the flag. A trumpet solo, "Handkerchief Dance" was given by Katheen Moran. The boys and girls that had served as Library and Office helpers during the year were recognized as well as were the Safety Patrol boys. A chorus composed of seventh and eighth grade girls sang "the Little Red School House" and "the Song of Praise".

The Perfect Attendance Certificates and a number of medals were presented by principal, Henry B. Ferrell. H. S. Barnes awarded the American Legion Citizenship medals. The Tennessee History medal was presented by Mrs. John W. Terry, Regent of the D. A. R.
